Not everyone can claim to be free. To be able to decide freely, to think freely, to feel freely, to act freely. This is rarely or never possible in our society. So you look up in the air and your gaze follows the eagle, the wind rustles through its feathers, your gaze reaches far into the distance. In short, you want to feel the feeling of freedom as well as you do. At least for a little moment. Acrylic on canvas / stretcher Signed by the artist With certificate of authenticity
