Michael Rofka:
Sculpture "Triad" (1997)

€3,000.00

The triad is composed of three elements made of three different materials. There is a black steel body, a symmetrical but irregular tetrahedron that stands on a point. A gray-stained wooden body that seems to support the sculpture from behind and an element made of copper sheet that breaks the symmetry of the sculpture between these parts. This combines constructive elements with poetry and sensuality of the different materials. Associations may suggest themselves, but they are entirely up to a viewer. It is a powerful sculpture with its own unique expression.
