"In 'From Here to There and Back', a skeletal framework on the right contrasts with undefined dark blue forms emerging from a mist on the left. The ultramarine blue form at the top right remains seemingly detached, but is part of the scaffolding. This juxtaposition creates a sense of journey and transformation, with the rigid structure on one side and the amorphous forms on the other. The interplay of defined and undefined elements suggests a movement between clarity and ambiguity, stability and fluidity. It captures the essence of transition and the cyclical nature of exploration and return."
