

Street scenes take place in interior spaces. A contradiction that at the same time describes the moment of coming together of human and architectural components.