

Mo Fontaine: Picture "Centaurea" (2022)

€4,250.00

The 'blue flower' is considered a central motif of German Romanticism: the search for this magical flower is a cipher interpreted as a longing for love and infinity - a longing that remains unfulfilled, at least for the German literati. This flower still life is not a snapshot, but a temporally condensed and spatially removed motif that understands flowers in their ambivalence: their blooming and wilting, their strength and their fragility. The two cornflowers are in an elegant overlay vase that quotes French Art Nouveau. Collaged elements are incorporated into the picture's background, creating a lively texture in the staging, which is reduced to a few pictorial elements.
