

Sabrina Seck: Picture "no life without bees" (2022)

€4,300.00

Bees are not only a supplier of wonderful honey, but also 80 percent responsible for the preservation of our plants. Without their pollination, there would be hardly any fruit and vegetable plants left, which would not least mean crop failures. A permanent shortage of fruit and vegetables would result in increased deaths from vitamin deficiencies. Should this industrious little animal become extinct, this would have fatal consequences for mankind, as the bee is an important, if not vital, factor in our economy. Instead of opposing them in the summer and swatting at them with a fly swatter, we should help to keep the declining populations stable. Unlike wasps, bees are not aggressive or belligerent. Only rarely do they sting for no reason. This work is a tribute to the bees of our world, which without them could not offer nearly this variety of diverse plants important to us.
