Michael Rofka:
Sculpture "Small oak" (2022)

€1,500.00

A broken branch of an oak tree is probably not given special attention by many. But for children and artists, it can be the beginning of a creative journey. In the case of the artist, this branch was the basis of a new sculpture that follows the original shape of the piece of nature, but virtually refines it and transforms it into an organic and complex shaped sculpture. The artist is not interested in representing anything. The wood itself as a natural material and an aesthetic design with a play of edges and surfaces are content enough. The sculpture is thus a refined piece of nature and invites visual and tactile pleasure. Of course, associations are allowed, but this is a matter of viewing. The wood is waxed and the sculpture is mounted on a dark stone plate.
