

Michael Rofka: Sculpture "Source" (2007)

€4,000.00

The 'source' is a marble sculpture with a circular opening exactly in the center. Around the opening, through which light can shine, a vortex shape forms from both sides. As a contrast, the two narrow sides are designed with the pointed chisel rather rough, but structured. The sculpture has elements of a geometric concrete art, but also offers a diverse haptic impression with the different surface treatment. The 'spring' can also be seen as a source of light. It can be a center of energy in a garden. The sculpture has as its base a dark block of hard stone.
