

Michael Rofka: Sculpture "Luna" (2016)

The sculpture Luna is worked out of a strong branch of a cherry tree with its wonderful red wood. This sculpture is also not representational although perhaps imaginative associations suggest themselves. The flowing elegant form, with parts interpenetrating, is complex. In traditional natural philosophies, the cherry tree was associated with the moon, hence the title Luna. The artist is interested in this connection. The sculpture is mounted on a steel plate. The wood is oiled.
