

Michael Rofka: Sculpture "View from the time" (2023)

€2,200.00

Even as a child, the artist collected stones. Among them were already smaller boulders of granite, which he could just carry. Still he carries stones now in the studio to make sculptures from them. So also from this erratic boulder as a 'souvenir' probably of the last ice age a small sculpture was created. Hard is the probably 10000 years ago arrived reddish granite. It now has a circular opening in the center. The surface is partly polished, partly the working traces of the hard metal chisel are left. The stone is mounted on a light green sandstone. The dimensions are without this base.
