

Ute Meyer: Picture "Shetland garden I" (2009)

€850.00

This picture was taken on a sunny summer day in a garden in the Shetland Islands. The garden is protected from the wind by a dry stone wall made of gray field stones. The bright orange and yellow calendula flowers and the blue irises are surrounded by the bright green. The sky is blue interspersed with gray and white clouds. In the distance behind the garden, a gentle hilltop can be seen in different shades of green. The oil paint is applied very impasto with the palette knife. This gives the image lively structures and changes the image expression, depending on the incidence of light. The image carrier is a stretcher frame with self-covered and triple primed linen. A steel cable serves as a suspension. The edges are painted. The picture can be hung without framing. The signature is in front.
