

Ilona Schmidt: Sculpture "The world before my eyes" (2023)

Sculpture "The world before my eyes" is a combination of clay and wood. It consists of an abstract head resting on a wooden body and placed in front of a globe. The title of the sculpture gives the impression that the figure has a special perspective on the world. The wooden body, like the head, was given a cold patina. Likewise the globe. The globe is deliberately rough textured to highlight the vulnerability of our planet. The surface of the sphere shows different textures and structures that point to the complexity and fragility of the world. The globe has an approximate diameter of 9 cm, the figure has a height of 26 cm/ width 6 cm and depth 8 cm. The head rests loosely on a rod.
