

Karin Döring: Picture "IMMERSED IN ME" (2024)

"Sunk in Me" is a very personal work that captures the complexity of emotions with just a few brushstrokes. Through the combination of restrained shades of gray and black, accentuated with vibrant orange, I create a mood that is both fragile and powerful. For me, the pensive gaze of the person depicted reflects a moment of inner contemplation - an immersion in one's own thoughts and feelings. For me, the true power of the portrait lies in the fact that it leaves room for individual interpretation. "What you see is what you feel." Each viewer will find a different emotional resonance in the picture. The reduction to essential forms and strokes creates a whole world of feelings that constantly change depending on who is standing in front of the picture and looking at it.
