

Michael Rofka: Sculpture "Venus horn" (2018)

€800.00

The Venus horn consists of a piece of birch wood and a piece of copper. The birch as a tree and the copper as a metal were assigned to Venus in traditional nature teachings, hence the title. It is a small, elegantly poetic sculpture that describes an arc in space. Viewed simply as an aesthetic object or with associations, it offers numerous possible interpretations. The artist does not specify these but leaves this to the freedom of the observer. The small sculpture is mounted on a piece of marble with a spacer. The dimensions include everything including the base.
