

Heinz Stoewer: Picture "Becoming and passing away" (2025)

€1,500.00

The work was inspired by walks in the forest and an examination of the power of nature, the ability of life to reinvent itself in seemingly inhospitable places. It has a connection to Romanticism and its painters such as Caspar David Friedrich, as they also depicted themes such as the sublimity and return of nature. The painting shows a tree stump from the middle of which a new, delicate tree shoot with colorful, bright leaves is growing. Strong color gradients of the background, ranging from greenish to intense blue tones, convey a lively and at the same time mystical atmosphere. The tree stump appears organic and undulating, which also reveals references to the natural forms of Art Nouveau. The contrast between the dead wood and the new life symbolizes renewal, growth and the cycles of nature. The work is signed/dated on the back.
